Executive Summary – What are we working toward

Throughout the various consultations with members of Qalipu First Nation, Chief and Council and staff there has been a recurring and overriding message. This message emphasizes the importance of cultural revitalization, expanding and improving services to members, creating opportunities through training, education and economic development and a commitment to the environment.

The purpose of this strategic plan is to set goals within the nine key pillars of Qalipu First Nation and to provide guidance for the development of annual operating plans without being too prescriptive. The period covered by the strategic plan is 2020-2029. However, the QFN is utilizing a three-year planning horizon with update and renewal at the end of the first three years.

Qalipu First Nation (QFN) is working toward a comprehensive plan so that it addresses the needs of members to the fullest extent possible, using the financial and human resources that it has available. To ensure that the needs of all of its members are clearly understood, the QFN is committed to meaningful engagement – both in person through Ward meetings, staff-member engagement through programs and services, comprehensive community consultations and online, specific focus groups and interactive streaming technologies.

The QFN also encourages and embraces youth participation in the planning, governance and advisory models of the Band. The development of an annual youth gathering to build leadership skills, identify the concerns and needs of youth members and elicit input on the priorities of the Band, conveys the desire and commitment of the QFN to build its future leadership. The appointment of a Youth Representative, by youth, to the Council ensures that the voice of young people will be heard at the decision-making table.

The QFN understands that it needs a resilient, flexible and strong organization and civil service that can provide quality services to members and respond to unforeseen challenges in the external environment. To that end, the QFN is working towards strengthening the organizational structures of the Band to reduce the gaps between demand and capacity. It is also committed to strengthening the civil service of the Band and creating an environment characterized by low levels of turnover, a strong sense of belonging, high levels of employee satisfaction and a collective commitment to positive outcomes for members.

Qalipu First Nation was established without reserve land. Consequently, several programs and services that are available to status Indians living on reserve are not available to Qalipu members. This leads to some confusion and misunderstanding within the membership regarding the type and scale of services that Qalipu can provide. Some members see comprehensive community health programs, housing and capital lands, policing and justice and other programs and services at work on reserves and believe that these are programs that Qalipu should also provide. The consultations did not set out to examine these perceptions, which makes it difficult to determine how representative or prevalent these views are across the membership. As with any large organization, the QFN will find it necessary to manage expectations commensurate with its capacity.

Qalipu First Nation takes its responsibility for environmental stewardship seriously. Responsible management of resources, promotion of traditional lifestyles in which members live in harmony with the environment, balancing protection of the environment with natural resource development and land usage, embracing green technologies and preservation of the land for future generations are all part of the Band's collective identity.

One thing that is very clear from the consultations – members want culture and heritage to be the number one priority of Qalipu First Nation. In community meetings and multiple surveys over two separate strategic planning periods, the desire for the Band to address culture and heritage emerges as the top priority of the membership. Qalipu First Nation embraces this priority and is committed to providing a comprehensive, coordinated and collaborative culture and heritage initiative for members.
